Aviation cybersecurity

What's around the corner,
and are we ready for it?

Cyber-attacks are relatively low cost and low risk for the perpetrator, but can be a very high cost for the targeted organisation and society.

This workshop brings together a range of experts from industry and regulation to consider both existing and potential future cyber risks and identify a top 10 list of both urgent and mid-term research that is required to maintain a safe and secure air transport system, today and in the future.
